33 HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS TO ENTER COLLEGES IN FALL

Baccalaureate Sermon On Sunday Will Be First Activity Of Commencement Week.

Thirty-three of the 74 members of the senior class at the Gettysburg High School will continue their education after graduating, either at normal schools or colleges.

Because women students are barred from entering Gettysburg College in the fall, the number of high school seniors, who plan to enter the local institution of learning, is somewhat smaller than usual. Only 12 seniors have signified their intention of entering Gettysburg College.

Eight of the seniors will enter Shippensburg Normal School in preparation for teaching positions, and thirteen members of the graduating class will attend other higher institutions of learning.

Miss Helen K. Stallsmith, valedictorian, and Miss Miriam Hartzell, who won third honors, are planning to enter Lebanon Valley College, Annville, in the fall, and Miss Elizabeth Woods, salutatorian, will enter Wellesley College. John Mumper, president of the senior class, will attend Gettysburg College.

15 Are Undecided
Fifteen of the seniors are undecided, either as to the school they will attend next year or as to their future activities. Many of the 15 are expected to enter some higher institution of learning.

Ten of the graduates will become teachers in the fall, with a few of these planning to take summer courses either at Gettysburg College or at Shippensburg.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached in Trinity Reformed church, Sunday evening, by the Rev. N. L. Horn, as the first commencement (Continued on Second Page.)

Old Resident Visits Town After 38 Years in West

Gettysburg is a spectacle eliciting expressions of astonishment from Joseph Codori, of Los Angeles, who has returned to visit his native town exactly 38 years after he left to go West.

The western visitor was amazed by the many changes and improvements made to the town, streets, buildings and homes since he started west on May 28, 1886.

Mr. Codori is on a month's vacation. He is an artist with one of Hollywood's moving picture companies. He learned his trade in Gettysburg, and for a time worked with Captain Calvin Gilbert, Springs avenue, as a painter.

Mr. Codori is spending several weeks with Mrs. Minnie Lackner, Chambersburg street.

LENTZ MEMORIAL MONUMENT TO BE UNVEILED SUNDAY

Mother of World War Veteran Will Take Part In Ceremonies at National Cemetery.

Mrs. Israel Lentz, of near Gettysburg, mother of Albert J. Lentz, will unveil the monument in honor of her son, first Gettysburg man to pay the supreme sacrifice in the World War, at exercises to be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the National cemetery, where Lentz is buried.

The American Legion here, which bears the name of Albert J. Lentz, will be in charge of the exercises. Preceding the parade, the Legionnaires will march from the corner of York and Stratton streets to the national burial ground. The drum corps of the post will furnish music for the marchers.

The Rev. C. C. Cole, pastor of the Gettysburg Methodist Episcopal church, will be the speaker at the exercises. Invocation will be given by the Rev. N. L. Horn, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and the benediction by the Rev. W. C. Robinson, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

William G. Weaver, a past commander of the local post, will present the marker on behalf of the community and the post to Captain S. C. Thompson, present commander of the post.

The monument of Barre, Vermont, granite was erected through the generosity of public-spirited citizens of Gettysburg and the Albert J. Lentz post. The stone cost several hundred dollars, and is considered a fitting tribute to the heroism and bravery of young Lentz, who was one of the first Gettysburg men to enlist after the World War began.

RIVALS TO MEET IN ANNUAL BATTLE

The baseball attraction of commencement week at Gettysburg College is the annual game between the Orange and Blue and Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, time-honored rivals. On the whole, the Marylanders have had a better season than the northern opponents, but Gettysburg always trains to the letter for this last important game on its schedule, and a close battle can be expected when the two teams clash on Nixon field, Monday afternoon, June 7.

Mt. St. Mary's has won from Albright, Georgetown, Navy, Loyola and Dickinson, and lost to the Quantico Marines.

GREETERS PLAN TO VISIT HERE

4 EAGLE SCOUTS AWARDED BADGES FOR FINE WORK

"Bill" Wood Addresses Troop at Meeting; Honor Is Highest Given By National Body.

Unstinted praise for the Boy Scouts' organization was given by W. Wood, head coach at Gettysburg College, in an address at exercises Friday evening when four members of Troop 3, Boy Scouts of Gettysburg, were conferred with Eagle rank, the highest honor which can be accorded a scout.

The Boy Scout organizations was commended in glowing terms by Mr. Wood as a character-building organization, with its body-building principles of slightly less importance. Special tribute was paid by the speaker to Clyde L. Bream, scoutmaster of Troop 3, through whose efforts the single remaining local troop of scouts in Gettysburg has survived and flourished.

Mr. Wood particularly commended the four new Eagle scouts, who, he said, by their own efforts, perseverance and persistency, have at last reached "the coveted goal" of every scout. "Good scouts of today will be leading citizens of tomorrow," the speaker added.

Business Men Present
More than half a hundred persons interested in scouting attended the Eagle rank conferring exercises in Troop 3 headquarters in the Weaver building, Center Square. In the audience were men, prominent in the business life of the community, and former scouts.

Scoutmaster Bream was master of ceremonies. The members of Troop 3 marched into the room where the exercises were held, while "To the Colors" was sounded by Bugler William Swisher. The scouts pledged allegiance to the Stars and Stripes, after which Scoutmaster Bream briefly outlined the history of Troop 3 and some of its many activities.

Walter D. Reynolds, supervising principal of Gettysburg's public schools, and chairman of the local court of honor in scouting, presented the Eagle merit badges to the four scouts, after which the meeting adjourned.

Eagle rank is attained by those scouts who have passed 21 merit badge tests to the satisfaction of the local court of honor, and only one scout in every 10,000 wins Eagle emblems, indicative of the highest honor scoutdom pays to its followers.

Only two other Gettysburg scouts have had Eagle badges conferred upon them. They are John Mickle and Frank Gardner. Both were members of Troop 3. Two other scouts in that troop are working their way toward the coveted goal and it is possible that they, too, will become Eagles shortly.

NEW FLAG POLE TO BE DEDICATED

Loyal Legion of Pennsylvania Will Conduct Services at General Meade Headquarters.

The new steel flag staff at Meade's headquarters, which replaces one blown down last year, will be formally dedicated Monday morning at 9:15 o'clock. The new flag pole is the gift of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of Pennsylvania, which had erected the wooden pole at Meade's headquarters. The pole gave way under a heavy wind.

An invitation to raised the first American flag to the top of the new staff had been extended to George Meade III, of Philadelphia, a grandson of General George Meade, victorious commander in the Battle of Gettysburg, but Mr. Meade has informed that he would be unable to attend.

Colonel E. B. Cope, superintendent of the national military park here, and one of the four members of the Loyal Legion residing in Adams county, will hoist the flag to the top of the new mast. He will be assisted in the ceremony by Captain Calvin Gilbert, Captain J. Q. A. Peiffer and John D. Keith, the other three members of the Loyal Legion in the county.

BONNIWELL TAKES LEAD OVER SHULL

Plurality of 28 Votes Changes Standing of Democratic Candidate For Governor.

Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, Philadelphia, took the lead in the Democratic gubernatorial contest away from Judge Samuel E. Shull, Stroudsburg, who had been leading since the early returns began to filter in.

The final official count from all counties will be needed to determine the ultimate standing of the two candidates.

Judge William E. Porter, New Castle, the third candidate for the nomination, was 13,000 behind the two other candidates.

On the basis of returns available last night, Judge Bonniwell had a lead of twenty-eight votes.

This lead was derived principally by a big reduction in the Shull vote in the Allegheny county official figures, together with changes in official figures from other counties.

The figures available included official returns from fifty-six counties, forty-nine of which have been filed with the State Bureau of Elections. The eleven remaining counties are now complete, but unofficial.

Dog Saves Boy From Drowning Near Glen Rock

Had it not been for the heroic effort of "Terry," an airedale dog owned by Dr. Clyde L. Seitz, of Glen Rock, Stanley Smith, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of that place, would probably have been drowned in the Codorus creek here, Thursday. A number of boys were playing near the creek at the falls near Rosers' department store building and young Smith fell in.

The dog seeing his predicament went into the water and rescued the boy. One eye witness said that young Smith went under once.

Quite a heavy pole was thrown into the water before the accident and was sunk partly into the mud. "Terry" displayed his strength when he went into the water, grabbed the pole and brought it to shore.

WOMAN'S BODY IS UNIDENTIFIED

Bayonne Authorities Puzzled: Supposed Missing Woman Found in Almshouse.

(By Associated Press.) Bayonne, N. J., May 29.—Mystery surrounding the death and name of a woman whose body was found floating in the Kill von Kull today remained unsolved. Belief that the body was that of Mrs. Mary Clark Baker, opium wealthy woman of New York, was dispelled when an inmate of Laurel Hill almshouse claimed she was Mrs. Baker.

The mistaken identification was made yesterday by Mrs. May McHale, a cousin. She told police her cousin disappeared years ago after suffering financial and social reverses. Shown a photograph of the unclothed and bruised body, Mrs. McHale made what was believed to be a positive identification. A curious deformity of Mrs. Baker's right hand, similar to one on the right hand of the dead woman, was thought to have aided in the erroneous identification.

Russell was about 25 years old, and when he joined the show lived at the Palmer House, Ponca City, Oklahoma. The body will be buried in Greenmount cemetery, York.

PRESBYTERIAN PENSIONS GAIN WARDENS DENIED PERSONAL PROFIT

Aged Ministers of Church Received $537,129 During Past Year; Increase of $21,749.

(By Associated Press.) Baltimore, May 28.—The pension expenditures of the Presbyterian church for 1925 totalled $537,129, an increase of $21,749 over last year. Dr. Henry B. Master, of Philadelphia, general secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation, who made the report to the General Assembly here, said, however, that this was less than fifty per cent of the allotment of the finance committee of the General Council for this work.

Dr. Master stated that the great difficulty of the work was to educate from the minds of pensioners the feeling that this money represented a charitable dole.

The highest pensions were paid to members of the honor roll, 65 or more years of age, the average annuity being $753. The report lamented that more than a thousand widows receive an average of only $219.

The report stated that the Presbyterian pension system is the oldest on this continent, having been organized in 1717 with a "Fund for Pious Uses."

Pensions now are handled by the contributory sustentation fund and Dr. Master expressed the hope that the coming year would see the cooperation of at least 4,000 churches in this system.

SCOUTS TO MARCH AT VALLEY FORGE

Boys Will Hold Parade and Hikes at Historic Revolutionary Battlefield Monday.

Valley Forge, Pa., May 29.—Upon the grounds here where Washington's ragged Continentals suffered through the winter of 1776, a modern army of Boy Scouts will gather Monday to honor the memory of the Revolutionary heroes of a century and a half ago.

Upwards of 600 boys from scout troops at Germantown, Mt. Airy and Chestnut Hill will make the pilgrimage by special train to Valley Forge for the Memorial Day services. Six years ago they first came here to conduct the memorial ceremonies and each year since they have come in larger numbers.

Upon their arrival early Monday morning the boys will march to the camp grounds, passing in review before Washington's headquarters. A service will be held on the grounds under the direction of the Rev. W. Herbert Burke, rector of the Washington Memorial chapel. They will march then to Lieutenant Waterman's grave upon which a wreath will be placed by Dr. Holman White. After a short service to be conducted by the Rev. William Farrell, the scouts will return to the parade grounds and historical hikes over the Continental Army campground will follow.

Three years ago the Boy Scouts of District No. 8 presented the first state flag to the Memorial Chapel. Now every state in the union is represented. Last year the scouts presented to the chapel four Continental Army uniforms which are worn now whenever there is an official state service.

The observance of the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence through the Sesqui-centennial Exposition in Philadelphia this year is expected to bring many thousands of visitors to Valley Forge and the officials in charge of the park are making preparations to take care of them. With the exposition due to open next week an unusually large crowd is expected here for Memorial Day.

As part of the plans to provide for the visitors extensive improvements upon the roads through the park have been authorized by the Park commission and, although all of the work will not be completed by Memorial Day, visitors will find most of the drives in good condition.

WOMAN'S BODY IS UNIDENTIFIED

Bayonne Authorities Puzzled; Supposed Missing Woman Found in Almshouse.

(By Associated Press.) Bayonne, N. J., May 29.—Mystery surrounding the death and name of a woman whose body was found floating in the Kill von Kull today remained unsolved. Belief that the body was that of Mrs. Mary Clark Baker, one-time wealthy woman of New York, was dispelled when an inmate of Laurel Hill almshouse claimed she was Mrs. Baker.

The mistaken identification was made yesterday by Mrs. Mary McHale, a cousin. She told police her cousin disappeared years ago after suffering financial and social reverses. Shown a photograph of the unclothed and bruised body, Mrs. McHale made what was believed to be a positive identification. A curious deformity of Mrs. Baker's right hand, similar to one on the right hand of the dead woman, was thought to have aided in the erroneous identification.

Showman Killed; Crushed By Train

Henry Russell, employed by Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West Show, was caught between the show cars and an iron fence of the Pennsylvania railroad near the George street crossing, York, while the show train was being prepared for unloading and was crushed to death Friday morning.

As the train moved westward, Russell was rolled between the fence and the cars until he was dropped to the sidewalk at the end of the fence at George street, a distance of seventy-five feet, and was dead when picked up. The skull was fractured and an ear torn off.

Russell was about 25 years old, and when he joined the show lived at the Palmer House, Ponca City, Oklahoma. The body will be buried in Greenmount cemetery, York.

PRESBYTERIAN
PENSIONS GAIN

Aged Ministers of Church Received $537,129 During Past Year; Increase of $21,749.

Baltimore, May 28.—The pension expenditures of the Presbyterian church for 1925 totalled $537,129, an increase of $21,749 over last year. Dr. Henry B. Master, of Philadelphia, general secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation, who made the report to the General Assembly here, said, however, that this was less than fifty per cent of the allotment of the finance committee of the General Council for this work.

Doctor Master stated that the greatest difficulty of the work was to eradicate from the minds of pensioners the feeling that this money represented a charitable dole.

The highest pensions were paid to members of the honor roll, 65 or more years of age, the average annuity being $553. The report lamented that more than a thousand widows receive an average of only $239.

The report stated that the Presbyterian pension system is the oldest on this continent, having been organized in 1717 with a "Fund for Pious Uses."

Pensions now are handled by the contributory sustentation fund and Doctor Master expressed the hope that the coming year would see the cooperation of at least 4,000 churches in this system.

"Satan in Sables" with Lowell Sherman is a picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

The story opens during the revelries on the night of the Fete de la M-Careme in Paris. In his sumptuous apartment, Prince Michael Yeredoff, an immensely wealthy Russian noble who has made his home in Paris since the debacle in his own country, is giving one of the wild parties for which he is renowned. Erskin, an English lord; Ninon, a fashionable demimonde; and Armand, a man-about-town, are among the castles helping to make Michael's gay life gay. Ninon makes Erskin jealous, whereupon he punishes the whole crowd by singing.

Rendered in cloying tones, feebly assisted by the orchestra, which vainly tried to follow his erratic tempo, Freddy's singing made a strange impression on his victims. Girls pretended to be overcome by sentimentality and emotion, strong men affected to weep, and Ninon theatrically engaged in convulsive sobbing on Armand's shoulder. Nothing daunted, Freddy commenced the second verse.

"Moi, pour ces deux mots, ces mots d'amour—"

"One moment, Freddy," interrupted Michael holding up his hand, "for some unaccountable reason the people outside seem to be objecting to your singing. Listen—"

"Hola, hola, good people, and who is dying up there?" a girl's clear voice floated through the window on the crest of a wave of laughter.

Michael and his guests walked to the balcony and looked out upon a band of revellers who had evidently stepped aside from the main jam and lingered to enjoy the atrocity of Freddy's vocal effort. A strange sight they presented, dressed in every conceivable costume and armed with balloons tied to sticks.

"Pray let me remove your mask," urged Michael.

From out their midst a girl in the costume of Columbine suddenly broke into a mad dance accompanied by the handclapping of the others. Slim and petite, with a dainty little figure well set off by her abbreviated costume, she seemed to have essence of youth and laughter as she pirouetted toward the moonlight. At the height of her dance she stopped to blow a kiss to Michael and his friends, who were watching her with genuine interest and admiration.

"Volla, we have a distinguished audience with us! Ladies and gentlemen, I beg of you to show us the poor fellow who sounded as one in the throes of death? Was it you, M'sieu?" The girl saucily pointed to Michael.

"No, I am sorry I cannot claim the distinction. But pray continue your dance—it is entrancing."

"The cobbles hurt my poor feet, M'sieu," the girl protested, hopping about on one foot while gingerly nursing the other.

"Then allow me to offer the floor of my humble salon," said Michael on an impulse of sheer whimsy. Turning to a servant he gave instructions to admit the detached group of revellers.

In they rushed pell mell, knocking over chairs, tossing the heavy draperies aside in wild eagerness. Led by Columbine, they marched round and round the room singing and mercilessly chastising the original guests with toy balloons. Finally they rushed to the banquet table and ravenously devoured every edible thing they could find.

Columbine was plainly the life of that little crowd; her vivacity and freshness interested Michael. A mass of coal black hair was carefully done up high on her head and a determined little chin revealed itself from beneath her mask. Her laugh was infectious and her svelte, trim, tight little body gave her a boyish appearance in spite of her scanty and revealing white costume.

"Satan in Sables" with Lowell Sherman is a picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

The story opens during the revels on the night of the Fete de la Mi-Careme in Paris. In his sumptuous apartment, Prince Michael Yervodoff, an immensely wealthy Russian noble who has made his home in Paris since the debacle in his own country, is giving one of the wild parties for which he is renowned. Erskin, an English lord; Ninon, a fashionable demi-monde; and Armand, a man-about-town, are among the wastrels helping to make Michael's gay life gay. Ninon makes Erskin jealous, whereupon he punishes the whole crowd by singing.

Rendered in cloying tones, feebly assisted by the orchestra, which vainly tried to follow his erratic tempo, Freddy's singing made a strange impression on his victims. Girls pretended to be overcome by sentimentality and emotion, strong men affected to weep, and Ninon theatrically engaged in convulsive sobbing on Armand's shoulder.

Nothing daunted, Freddy commenced the second verse.

"Moi, pour ces deux mots, ces mots d'amour—"

"One moment, Freddy," interrupted Michael holding up his hand, "for some unaccountable reason the people outside seem to be objecting to your singing. Listen—"

"Hola, hola, good people, and who is dying up there?" a girl's clear voice floated through the window on the crest of a wave of laughter.

Michael and his guests walked to the balcony and looked out upon a band of revellers who had evidently stepped aside from the main jam and lingered to enjoy the atrocity of Freddy's vocal effort. A strange sight they presented, dressed in every conceivable costume and armed with balloons tied to sticks.

"Pray let me remove your mask," urged Michael.

From out their midst a girl in the costume of Columbine suddenly broke into a mad dance accompanied by the handclapping of the others. Slim and petite, with a dainty little figure well set off by her abbreviated costume, she seemed the very essence of youth and laughter as she pirouetted there in the moonlight. At the height of her dance she stopped to blow a kiss to Michael and his friends, who were watching her with genuine interest and admiration.

"Volla, we have a distinguished audience with us! Ladies and gentlemen, I beg of you to show us the poor fellow who sounded as one in the throes of death? Was it you, M'sieu?" The girl saucily pointed to Michael.

"No, I am sorry I cannot claim the distinction. But pray continue your dance—it is entrancing."

"The cobblestones hurt my poor feet, M'sieu," the girl protested, hopping about on one foot while gingerly nursing the other.

"Then allow me to offer the floor of my humble salon," said Michael on an impulse of sheer whimsy. Turning to a servant he gave instructions to admit the detached group of revellers.

In they rushed pell mell, knocking over chairs, tossing the heavy draperies aside in wild eagerness. Led by Columbine, they marched round and round the room singing and mercilessly chastising the original guests with toy balloons. Finally they rushed to the banquet table and ravenously devoured every edible thing they could find.

Columbine was plainly the life of that little crowd; her vivacity and freshness interested Michael. A mass of coal black hair was carelessly done up high on her head and a determined little chin revealed itself from beneath her mask. Her laugh was infectious and her svelte, trim, tight little body gave her a boyish appearance in spite of her scanty and revealing white costume.

"And what is your name, ma cherie?" asked Michael, sitting down beside her.

"Colette, M'sieu," she answered between mouthfuls. "And who am I? La Premier Danseuse of the Rue Chaligny, am I not, Harlequin?" she demanded, turning to a huge fellow dressed in a costume three sizes too small for him and so busily engaged in picking a chicken bone that he could only signify his assent by repeated noddings of his head.

"I am honored, indeed, by your presence, Mademoiselle Colette, but pray let me remove your mask so that we can the more enjoy your beauty," urged Michael.

Colette was coyly severe. "M'sieu, my mask stays where it is! I suppose that next you will be begging for a kiss. Ugh, these men disgust me. A kiss, a kiss, that is what they always ask, young or old, short or tall, strong or feeble. They even sing about it!" She looked teasingly at Freddy Erskin.

"But it is not fair to keep the sight of so pretty a face—for pretty I am sure it must be—from us," and Michael, in a spirit of devilry, reached over to undo her mask.

Colette laughing, evaded him. Her eyes suddenly rested on the watch fob hanging from his pocket, a gold affair set with a magnificent emerald.

"What a beautiful jewel! Is it an heirloom, M'sieu?"

"It has been in our family for many generations and we call it the Yervodoff emerald." There was prideful concession in Michael's manner as he took the fob out of his pocket and handed it to her. Colette examined and fondled it with admiration.

"The ghosts of many a story, both of happiness and tragedy, cluster hauntingly around that little stone," Michael commented softly.

"The ghosts of many a story, both of happiness and tragedy, cluster hauntingly around that little stone," Michael commented softly.

PATRIOTIC PLEA
 (Contributed)

The Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, commonly known simply as Sons of Veterans, appeal to the public generally for a larger participation in the Memorial Day exercises on Monday.

We all believe in the day, and want it to be perpetuated. We owe it to our surviving veterans to show them the gratitude we feel toward them and their departed comrades. We owe it to ourselves to show our love and respect to those who preserved for us the unity and liberty of our country.

But how often we aim simply to witness and to enjoy the day, without having any part in making the day. Of course, it is easier to drive about in our cars than to join a procession or to engage in exercises. It is easier to stand at the street curb than to follow the band. But who, then, shall be responsible for the preservation of the well established customs of the day? Why not you?

Instead of simply admiring the flags along the street, put out your own. Instead of simply watching the procession, find a place in it. Instead of waiting to read in the evening paper of the exercises, hear them in the cemetery.

Every effort is made to make the parade and the exercises following interesting and profitable, and to render it safe to join in them. By the cooperation of the burgess and council, Baltimore street and part of Chambersburg street and the circle used for the formation will be kept free from traffic and parking, so that the schools and organizations may march with safety and comfort.

Let there be a full turn out of the schools. Let patriotic and fraternal organizations be in line. And why should there not be a large group of citizens belonging to no organization whatever? Just carry a flag and fall into line in a general group, and in the evening enjoy the feeling that you have helped, and made Memorial Day mean more by your helping.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

MY COUNTRY
 My country, oh my country, God keep you free from hate!
 God bless your smiling women-folk and children at the gate!
 God keep the windows shining with light of peace and love.
 With life as rich with promise as is the Heaven above.

My country, oh my country, may all your men stay true!
 May joy and laughter greet them when the long day's toil is through!
 May each man see before him, despite life care and tears.
 His home adorned with beauty as the labor of his years.

My country, oh my country, where none must toil in vain,
 Where he who sows in springtime in autumn reaps the grain,
 God grant you still to prosper, God keep you free from wrong,
 A land of honest laughter, a land of mirth and song.

My country, oh my country, God keep you from despair,
 God bolt your doors to malice and envy's weight of care;
 God keep your women smiling in homes where beauty gleams
 And grant to every toiler fulfillment of his dreams.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

"Mother, mother!" shouted her little rabbit as Lady Love came hopping up the winding path through the bramble bushes, "I saw Scarlet Tanager today in his crimson suit."

"Have he and his mate commenced to build a nest?" asked the little rabbit lady.

"Oh, yes," answered the bunny boy. "It looks just like a cup woven of twigs and tendrils. They've built it way out on the lower bough of the Tall Pine Tree."

"Summer is coming soon," laughed the little rabbit's mother, "Scarlet Tanager never starts to build unless he is sure that June is here."

"What a beautiful scarlet coat he wears," cried the little rabbit. "But his tail and wings are black, with a dash of white on the under wing coverts. He's a pretty bird."

"Indeed he is, but when autumn comes he doffs these bright colors for a suit of light olive green very like that of his mate."

"Why doesn't she, too, wear scarlet feathers?" asked the little rabbit. "Because it would not be in harmony with her surroundings. Loving Mother Nature knows that bright colors would attract Hungry Hawk and other birds of prey; so she gives Scarlet Tanager's mate an olive-green dress in order that she may not be seen amid the green leaves when nesting her eggs."

"I wish I could have peeped into her nest," sighed the bunny boy. "You might have seen three or four eggs of tender blue, dotted and marked with brown," answered his mother. "Hello! Where did you learn so much about Scarlet Tanager?" all of a sudden asked a voice, and there stood dear Uncle Lucky, the old gentleman rabbit, a smile on his face and

Instead of simply admiring the flags along the street, put out your own. Instead of simply watching the procession, find a place in it. Instead of waiting to read in the evening paper of the exercises, hear them in the cemetery.

Every effort is made to make the parade and the exercises following interesting and profitable, and to render it safe to join in them. By the cooperation of the burgess and council, Baltimore street and part of Chambersburg street and the circle used for the formation will be kept free from traffic and parking, so that the schools and organizations may march with safety and comfort.

Let there be a full turn out of the schools. Let patriotic and fraternal organizations be in line. And why should there not be a large group of citizens belonging to no organization whatever? Just carry a flag and fall into line in a general group, and in the evening enjoy the feeling that you have helped, and made Memorial Day mean more by your helping.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE EFFICIENT HEART

I HAVE a friend who is now in the hospital. The doctors have looked him over and some, probably, have scratched their heads and remarked to themselves: "H'm." And then, as by way of parenthesis: "Funny heart you have. Misses beats, or something?"

But one thing the doctors don't know about that heart. I have known it for sixteen years. It is always working for others. It bubbles up, it spreads out, it reaches, it laughs so that all who hear it grow better. That heart is an efficient heart, no matter what the doctors say.

And that, after all, is what counts as far as a heart is concerned. They told the great W. H. Hudson when he was a boy that he had a "weak heart" and that he should be very careful, that he would probably not live any too long—but if he was on the lookout and used caution he "might" live into middle age. Hudson died at the ripe time when he was around 80 years! But, you see, he had another heart working for his weak physical heart—an efficient spiritual heart which warmed the entire world.

The efficient heart is very wonderful. It can look deep into other hearts and wash worries out there, it can lift the shades that have so long been drawn, it can teach patience, reveal love, and it can spread sunshine when the day is almost night with darkness.

There are men who make millions in money, who become powerful as leaders in politics, in literature, in the arts, and yet who died with poor, un-nourished hearts because they never learned the secret of making their hearts efficient for the large tasks of life.

A kinky spiritual heart is dangerous. It means that you are missing out on happiness and that all the health and wealth in the world cannot make up for inefficiency here.

It is very interesting and important to know people, how to interest them, how to lead them, how to make them efficient in their everyday work, but it is of vaster import to understand hearts and know just how to make them happier. For people are happy only in their hearts after all.

Habits control our destiny. If you can get the habit of doing some simple task or service each day that will make someone else a better and more content human being, you have done something important toward an efficient heart.

MY COUNTRY

My country, oh my country, God keep you free from hate!
God bless your smiling women-folk and children at the gate!
God keep the windows shining with light of peace and love.
With life as rich with promise as is the Heaven above.

My country, oh my country, may all your men stay true!
May joy and laughter greet them when the long day's toil is through!

May each man see before him, despite life care and tears,
His home adorned with beauty as the labor of his years.

My country, oh my country, where none must toil in vain,
Where he who sows in springtime in autumn reaps the grain,
God grant you still to prosper, God keep you free from wrong,
A land of honest laughter, a land of mirth and song.

My country, oh my country, God keep you from despair,
God bolt your doors to malice and envy's weight of care;
God keep your women smiling in homes where beauty gleams
And grant to every toiler fulfillment of his dreams.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tiddell and Benjamin Hawkins, near Fayetteville, were guests of Catherine and Jennie Kimple last Sunday.

"Mother, mother!" shouted her little rabbit as Lady Love came hopping up the winding path through the bramble bushes, "I saw Scarlet Tanager today in his crimson suit."

"Have he and his mate commenced to build a nest?" asked the little rabbit lady.

"Oh, yes," answered the bunny boy. "It looks just like a cup woven of twigs and tendrils. They've built it way out on the lower bough of the Tall Pine Tree."

"Summer is coming soon," laughed the little rabbit's mother, "Scarlet Tanager never starts to build unless he is sure that June is here."

"What a beautiful scarlet coat he wears," cried the little rabbit. "But his tail and wings are black, with a dash of white on the under wing covers. He's a pretty bird."

"Indeed he is, but when autumn comes he doffs these bright colors for a suit of light olive green very like that of his mate."

"Why doesn't she, too, wear scarlet feathers?" asked the little rabbit. "Because it would not be in harmony with her surroundings. Loving Mother Nature knows that bright colors would attract Hungry Hawk and other birds of prey; so she gives Scarlet Tanager's mate an olive green dress in order that she may not be seen amid the green leaves when nesting her eggs."

"I wish I could have peeped into her nest," sighed the bunny boy.

"You might have seen three or four eggs of tender blue, dotted and marked with brown," answered his mother. "Hello! Where did you learn so much about Scarlet Tanager?" all of a sudden asked a voice, and there stood dear Uncle Lucky, the old gentleman rabbit, a smile on his face and his precious wedding stovepipe hat in his paw, for he was most polite when addressing ladies and never forgot to remove his hat.

"Dear, you startled me!" exclaimed the timid little rabbit lady. "How did I learn so much about Scarlet Tanager? I'll tell you. I once watched a pair who had built a nest nearby. Scarlet Tanager was a very devoted husband, always feeding his mate while she sat on the eggs, and when the little birds were hatched, he helped her feed and care for them."

"Well, well," laughed dear Uncle Lucky. "Maybe many of us could learn a lesson from the birds."

Little birds build bungalows
In almost every tree that grows.
They rear their young with tender care,
And with sweet music fill the air."

Goodness me, Little Reader! Isn't dear Uncle Lucky turning into a poet? Well, why shouldn't there be a poet in Rabbitland?

The seal that protects you. The Tydol dealer will gladly show it to you.

The only gasoline sold under a seal of protection

PROTECTING the quality of a gasoline is a difficult problem. Gasoline is colorless, and to the average motorist all gasolines look alike. Substitution is an easy matter. Especially when the quality of a gasoline is as high as that of Tydol, the risk of substitution looms big.

In New York City, for example, such dishonest substitution did take place—on a large scale. So-called "bootleg gasoline"—cheap, third-rate stuff was unloaded on the public through pumps plainly labelled with the trademarks of well-known quality gasolines.

Such a condition was intolerable to Tide Water, and to the Tydol dealers. To end the fraud which was being practiced on the public, a method of sealing Tydol pumps was devised so that Tydol and nothing but Tydol could be sold from a Tydol pump.

The sealed pump in this vicinity
And now the Tydol dealers in this vicinity have united in sealing all Tydol pumps. They want to prevent any possibility of inferior gasolines being substituted for Tydol. They believe that the high quality of Tydol deserves the seal of protection.

Therefore, a seal has been affixed on the intake pipe of every underground tank which feeds a Tydol pump. This seal is only broken when the dealer's tank is being filled with Tydol. Then the intake pipe is immediately resealed and remains sealed until the pump again needs to be refilled. Only genuine Tydol can enter a Tydol tank, only genuine Tydol can flow from the pump.

When you buy Tydol you get Tydol

Stop at the nearest Tydol dealer. Ask him to show you the seal that assures you that you get Tydol when you pay for Tydol. Your dealer is proud of his Tydol seal. And proud of Tydol, the only gasoline sold under a seal of protection.

PROTECTING the quality of a gasoline is a difficult problem. Gasoline is colorless, and to the average motorist all gasolines look alike. Substitution is an easy matter. Especially when the quality of a gasoline is as high as that of Tydol, the risk of substitution looms big.

In New York City, for example, such dishonest substitution did take place on a large scale. So-called "bootleg gasoline"—cheap, third-rate stuff—was unloaded on the public through pumps plainly labeled with the trademarks of well-known quality gasolines.

Such a condition was intolerable to Tide Water, and to the Tydol dealers. To end the fraud which was being practiced on the public, a method of sealing Tydol pumps was devised so that Tydol and nothing but Tydol could be sold from a Tydol pump.

The sealed pump in this vicinity

And now the Tydol dealers in this vicinity have united in sealing all Tydol pumps. They want to prevent any possibility of inferior gasolines being substituted for Tydol. They believe that the high quality of Tydol deserves the seal of protection.

Therefore, a seal has been affixed on the intake pipe of every underground tank which feeds a Tydol pump. This seal is only broken when the dealer's tank is being filled with Tydol. Then the intake pipe is immediately resealed and remains sealed until the pump again needs to be refilled. Only genuine Tydol can enter a Tydol tank, only genuine Tydol can flow from the pump.

When you buy Tydol you get Tydol

Stop at the nearest Tydol dealer. Ask him to show you the seal that assures you that you get Tydol when you pay for Tydol. Your dealer is proud of his Tydol seal. And proud of Tydol, the only gasoline sold under a seal of protection.
